Special Symposium: State of Education Now and the Future

Featuring both education and government leaders, the framework of this conversation will focus on the challenges of navigating the pathways that may or may not result in quality education. With ESSA powering down even further to state and LEAs, the implications for the highly mobile students we serve have become increasingly complex. This discussion will also explore the innovation potential, which lies within stronger, intentional collaborations between the military and civilian leaders, educators and policy-makers.
